CANADIAN WILDLIFE - No. 13

The Short-Legged Thumping Beaver.

The beaver is distinguished by his high rump and prominent front-teeth. He is a sociable if somewhat hyper-active fellow. In an excitable state he will thump the ground and slap the water. The beaver has a number of unusual characteristics, amongst them a fondness for trees, a passion for hydraulic engineering, and a persistent habit of mating while underwater.

Molson Canadian. What Beer's All About.

The Uncommon Black-Capped Loon.

The loon is known for his strange cry which is somewhere between a weird yodel and a wail. When undisturbed he rolls over on one side, one foot waving slowly in the air. Often he will sit up, stretch his neck, shake his head, then settle back. Despite his quirky behaviour-or perhaps because of it-the loon is a popular member of the waterfront crowd.
